

ABSTRACT

A catheter applied in perforations above the papillae in fistula-papillotomy with a constructive concept composed of a Y connector component, which has the function of promoting the injection of the contrast, even with the guiding line element inserted within its internal luminosity; and a method of using the catheter.